Brief Auto-biography As long as I can remember I have been writing songs like, reggae and pop, since I was a primary school kid, which is when I was about the age of 8. However, when Tupac died was the time I fell in love with rap because I felt he was a hero and his weapon was rap. When I say I love Tupac Shakur do not mean to say I am also a thug or it's good to be a thug. But I loved him for everything he stood for. None the less, I want to use rap as an instrument to change my world positively. After my encounter with Tupac's life and death, I fell in love with DMX and that was when I started writing rap music and wanted to name myself a bit like X, hence the M.O.X-Master Of Xcellence. Then it was 1999 and when I started rhyming and writing rap music a close friend then used to laugh at me and say "what do you think you are doing? And who will listen to your music?" Well imagine how I would feel and know that then it hurts to be me. The year 2002, 50 Cent came up and made me more eager to rap. Sometimes I like to rap like him, but I guess my pronunciations sound more like Pac. In 2005 after a serious heartbreak and search for a place to do my I.T (industrial Training), I felt the need to use my talent to create an industry rather than think I was going to graduate from the University to find work. Hence, I started writing my first ever commercial song and in 6months I had written already 14songs. However, in Nigeria, I guess I sounded too hardcore for my kind of music and as far as selling record was, that was not going to be a good start for me. Now, after writing over 30songs and graduating from the University (Igbinedion University, Okada, Edo state, Nigeria) and finishing my Youth service corps, I am set to hit the world with my 13Tracks album title "Kuomakugbe"-Unity.
